

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Nurses' Association from the Central Midwives Board, though many trained nurses hold a midwifery certificate.

6. The complete exclusion of the nursing profession from the Consultative Councils appointed by the Ministry of Health.

7. The way in which the Nurse's Registration Act was wrecked in the House of Commons by the influence of employers working through the College of Nursing, Ltd., (Limited).

We agree with English leaders in holding that these grievances have logically and inevitably forced British nurses to ally themselves with Labor in self-defense, and we offer them our sympathy and good wishes.

FAMINE THREATENS MILLIONS IN THE NEAR EAST

The desperate situation of the remnant of the Armenians which has survived Turkish cruelties is described in a cablegram sent to the Near East Relief Headquarters by C. V. Vickrey, executive secretary of that organization, who has just concluded a tour of Western Asia. His cablegram says:

"Have just returned from interior of Caucasus where million christian refugees and other Armenians have reached state of destitution that beggars all description. Most of able bodied men have already perished fighting for Allied cause. Remnant chiefly women and children are surrounded by hostile Turks, Kurds and Tartars and face almost certain extermination this winter unless help on a large scale comes from America. These people universally recognized in normal times as the most thrifty, industrious and prosperous people of Western Asia have now been for four years exiled or fugitive from their ancestral homes. Their last vestage of negotiable property has been sacrificed for food and protection. Repatriation this year is utterly impossible. Turks still hold their homes. Attempted return means death. Thousands of women and children have but a single garment to cover their nakedness and to protect them from the bitterly cold winter on the high plateaus around Mount Ararat. Empty flour sacks bearing names of well known American firms are improvised as clothing for children. Rags are used as shoes. All flour and food staples now come through Armenian relief but total supply in prospect will last only few weeks at most. Hundreds of tons of cast off clothing from America could be used immediately. Thirty thousand tons of foodstuffs in addition to present supply must be provided or this winter will bring the greatest harvest of death from famine that has yet been known by this martyr nation."